DECEMBER 2010

President's Message

The year is drawing to an end. It has been a great year for the club with many opportunities for our members to participate in events and expand our knowledge of Dressage. I look back over the year and realize how much we have accomplished. It has all been possible because of the hard work and dedication of many volunteers. In particular, we should thank the Board members who have spent a lot of time and energy to take care of the necessary business of the club. I have provided in this newsletter a summary of all the accomplishments for 2010 and when you read this list, you will be amazed, too.

Our final business for 2010 has been the election for the new Board of Directors and voting on important Amendments to our Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws. These Amendments have all passed and they will position us for the application of the 501(c)(3) tax exempt status. A special thanks to Rena Haynes for all her hard work on this. If we achieve this, it will bring great benefit to NMDA.

Congratulations to our 2011 newly elected Board members:

John Collins, President, Denai Meyer, Vice President, Rena Haynes, Treasurer and Rusty Cook, Secretary. We thank them for stepping up to serve on our Board. As Past President, I will remain on the Board as others have done before me. We hope that some of you will consider Board positions and if you are interested, please contact John at skipanddctf@aol.com

The new Board will begin their office on January 1, 2011. To encourage a smooth transition, we are holding our transition and 2011 planning Board meeting on Dec 7. If you are interested in giving input to next year's plans, please feel free to attend and let me or one of the Board Members know so we can plan the agenda and available space at the meeting.

SAVE THE DATES!

Saturday, January 22--NMDA will have our annual Awards Ceremony and Banquet and it will be

USDF Launches New e-Membership

Lexington, KY (November 5, 2010) - The United States Dressage Federation (USDF) has just launched its new USDF e-Membership. This membership is an online educational membership (non-competing) featuring e-TRAK, an online center that provides unlimited access to a searchable database of articles and videos on equine healthcare, training, and more. In addition to e-TRAK, e-Members will be able to access the online USDF Connection, USDF's member-only magazine, and enjoy discounted memberships with USDF's many educational partners. USDF e-Membership also includes the member discount rate at USDF live educational events and eligibility to earn USDF University Program credit through on line and live participation.

The cost of an adult e-Membership is $35/year and the cost of a youth e-Membership is $10/year. In addition to the wealth of education provided through this membership, e-Members will also receive a discount when shopping in the USDF online store, which offers a large collection of books and videos.

Cindy Vimont, Senior Director, stated, "In order to further our primary mission of education, we felt it was imperative that we offer an affordable membership that can provide anyone, even non-riders, with a link to our community and the educational resources we and our partners can provide. In this way we can expand our reach to include all horse enthusiasts who are interested in enhancing their learning experience through dressage education."

To learn more about USDF e-Membership or to join as a USDF e-Member, visit the USDF Web site at www.usdf.org, or contact the USDF office at usdressage@usdf.org.

For more information about USDF membership or programs, visit www.usdf.org, e-mail usdressage@usdf.org, or call (859) 971-2277.

held at the Tanoan Country Club in Albuquerque. There are more awards this year than ever before, including Volunteer Awards. Be looking for emails and web posting on the final 2010 Award Standings and details of the event. Saturday and Sunday February 26 and 27, we are kicking off the event year with a special educational Performance Enhancement seminar and clinic with Seana Adamson, a sports psychologist and Dressage trainer. She will help us get ready for the year with assistance in dealing with performance anxiety and how to maximize our focus and concentration while performing. See the full page ad in this Newsletter on this event and look for updates as we have more details on fees and the sign up process to attend.

Thank you to everyone for making my two years as President rewarding and fun. I have gotten to know so many interesting and colorful people and learned a lot along the way. I hope I can contribute to the future success of NMDA and wish the best for the new Board.

The Top Ten 'Green' Tasks Horse Owners Should Do Before Winter

by: TheHorse.com

September 29 2010, Article # 17030

Winterizing barns, harrowing pastures, draining hoses, and water tanks, and cleaning and properly storing show tack and other summer horse equipment are among the top things horse owners can do to prepare for winter.

"Taking care of what you have a a horse owners goes a long way toward being green," says Laurie Cerny, editor and publisher of Green Horsekeeping Guide. "Anytime you have to replace something, either from damage done by a horse or because of negligent maintenance, it not only costs you money, it also costs the environment."

Cerny also recommends posting a list of these tasks in the barn. "It's easy to get sidetracked on a nice fall day doing other things. Then before you know it, it's Thanksgiving and you're scrambling to get things done. There's nothing fun about trying to roll up frozen water hoses, or discovering a mouse has made a cozy winter nest using one of your show blankets."

Here are The Top Ten "Green" Tasks Horse Owners Should Do Before Winter:

1. Winterize the barn: This means repairing or replacing broken windows and doors, and making sure that they can close completely to keep out cold winter air and drafts. If you have a bathroom and/or heated wash rack, wrap the water heater with an insulated blanket. Hot water pipes can also be wrapped to help save energy. Refill under stall mats where needed, or haul in fill in stalls without mats. Remove anything that's not used during the winter like fans (blow off fan and motor with an air compressor), and any liquids that might freeze in an unheated barn like fly spray, hoof black, fence paint, etc.
2. Harrow pastures. If you don't have a harrow, use a pitchfork and break up manure piles.
3. Spread manure and compost on hay fields and on pastures that are resting for the winter.
4. Drain hoses and water tanks: Drain hoses of all water, roll them up, and store indoors. Unused water tanks should be drained and cleaned with dish soap or a bleach mixture--then turn them upside down if left outside. A run-in shed or a horse trailer that isn't going to be used during the winter is another good place to store water tanks.

Poisonous Plant Risk Increases as Pasture Grass Goes Dormant

by: Jodi DeLong

October 10 2008, Article # 12869 , TheHorse.com

As autumn rolls around, pastures become depleted as grass and plant growth slows prior to going dormant for winter. So, it's not surprising that this time of year can also bring an increase in reports of horses becoming ill from eating something they shouldn't have.

Karyn Bischoff, DVM, MS, Dipl. ABVT, a diagnostic toxicologist at Cornell University's New York State Animal Health Diagnostic Center, said it does appear there are more suspected cases of poison plant ingestion in late summer and autumn, but also says these are difficult to diagnose.

"Plant ingestions over time can cause chronic disease, so by the time the horse is noticeably sick, the plant is gone because it was all eaten, it's out of season, or the horses were moved to another stable or pasture after exposure," Bischoff explained.

She added that plant toxins can be difficult to find in the body as the particular toxin are sometimes not known, there are no good tests for it, or the toxin has metabolized and gone before the horse presents clinical signs of serious illness.

Happily, most toxic plants are not very palatable, and horses tend to avoid them.

Jack van Roestel, MSc, a longtime horse owner and forage consultant with AgraPoint in Kentville, Nova Scotia, stressed that prevention of poisoning begins with good pasture management.

"When it comes to grazing, it's good to have several paddocks that are rotationally grazed, with proper entrance and exit heights, rest periods, stocking numbers, and applied fertility," van Roestel said. "By having a fairly competitive grass stand, weed problems will be reduced."

Bischoff agreed that good pasture management goes a long way in preventing poisoning, but also stressed that horse owners should contact their veterinarian whenever they have concerns about health issues. "If they can't answer your questions right away, they are usually going to know the best places to find trustworthy information for you," she said.

5. Clean and store show tack: Give your show tack a good cleaning and bring it indoors for the winter. This will protect it from the damaging effects of extreme temperatures, as well as prevent potential damage from mice and other critters and insects that might over winter in your barn.

6. Wash fly sheets, fly masks, stable sheets, and unused halters. Repair any tears in blankets, masks, and leg wraps. Store these items in a sealed container like a tote.

7. Clean out horse trailers after their last use: If you don't plan on using the trailer over the winter, either store it inside, or tarp it--making sure to cover the tires. Empty perishable items from tack compartment, dressing room, and living quarters. Remove anything that could get damaged if the roof or windows leak. Put a couple handfuls of mothballs inside to help repel mice and other pests.

8. Fix fences: Make sure that fences are in good repair including working electric. Replace rotted boards and posts. You definitely don't want to be digging postholes in the frozen ground.

9. Paint gates: Gates seem to rust quickly in seam areas, as well as areas damaged by use and by horses. Use either sandpaper or a wire brush to remove rust, and then follow up with a coat of primer and a then with a rust deterring paint.

10. Stock up on staples: Filling the barn with hay for winter goes without saying, however, stocking up on other things like bedding, stall freshener products, salt blocks, de-wormers, etc., helps to eliminate unnecessary trips to the feed or farm store.

Here are some common plants to look out for in NM:

Alkaloids: These are the most powerful poisons and produce strong physiological reactions, generally affecting the nervous system. The alkaloid is usually distributed throughout the plant and is active whether it is fresh or dry.

- locoweeds (Astragalus spp.)
- larkspur (Delphinium spp.)
- groundsel (Senecio spp.)
- lupine (Lupinus spp.).

Glycosides. Glycosides are compounds composed of a toxic agent combined with a sugar. The toxic agent is harmful when released from the glycosides. Cyanide (HCN, prussic acid) is the most common toxin in the glycosides.

- Catclaw (Acacia greggii)
- chokecherry (Prunus virginiana)
- johnsongrass (Sorghum halepense)

Minerals. Excessive absorption of certain minerals may be dangerous to livestock. Selenium is possibly the most important poisonous mineral in New Mexico. And can be found in

- fourwing saltbush (Atriplex canescens)
- snakeweed (Gutierrezia sarothrae)
- asters (Aster spp.)
- Prince's plume (Stanleya pinnata)

Nitrogenous compounds. Both range and crop plants may contain potentially toxic levels of nitrogenous compounds. Care must be taken during drought or after fertilizer or herbicide application. Nitrates are also toxic in dry material and silage. Nitrogenous compounds are often found in many species of the

- amaranth (Amaranthaceae)

- sunflower (Asteraceae),
- mustard (Brassicaceae), and
- goose-foot (Chenopodiaceae) families.

Oxalates and organic acids. Many plants contain oxalates, but few species in New Mexico contain enough to be considered dangerous.

- Halogeton (Halogeton glomeratus)
- dock (Rumex spp.) possess soluble oxalates that are corrosive to animal tissue. Non-ruminants are more susceptible to oxalate poisoning than ruminants because the large rumen capacity enables the animal to detoxify small amounts of soluble oxalates. Most cases of ruminant poisoning occur on poor condition range-lands.

Resins or resinoids. These are highly complex organic compounds that are present in a number of plants. Resins are found in

- milkweeds (Asclepias spp.)
- marijuana (Cannabis sativa)
- water hemlock (Cicuta maculata)
- and chinaberry tree (Melia azedarach).

December 2010 Region 5 Message

I would like to thank everyone in Region 5, as I depart as your Regional Director after nine years. What an experience and an exciting time for USDF! The move to Lexington and Capital Campaign to pay for our National Educational Center resulted in a rent/mortgage free home in the center of United States horse country and the site of 2010 World Equestrian Games.

While I was Regional Director I had the opportunity to visit and meet members in all of our states, extending from the Canadian and Mexican borders. Since our region is so large, I made it a priority to balance our regional championships and educational opportunities between our northern and southern tier. Historically, we have had the championships in these states: 1996-NM, 1997-WY, 1998-AZ, 1999-CO, 2000-CO, 2001-NM, 2002-AZ, 2003-CO, 2004-AZ, 2005-CO, 2006-NM, 2007-CO, 2008-AZ, 2009-NM, 2010-CO, 2011-AZ. With a sixteen or more hour drive from the population centers of Denver, CO and Phoenix, AZ, this is the only fair solution. Again, with the Adult Clinics, we had Walter Zettl in AZ, Jane Savoie in CO, Betsy Steiner in NM and Charlotte Bredahl in AZ. Region 5 hosted the USDF Convention in Denver with the Kyra Kyrkland Symposium in 2008.

What is it like to be a Regional Director? Day long meetings at the convention and Spring Executive Board meeting, discussing the move to Lexington, balancing the budget, restructuring to improve and streamline governance, along with conference calls and countless emails and phone calls. Our governance is all-volunteer: the President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer and Regional Directors, as well as the Participating Member and GMO delegates. We have a unique, grassroots organization and I am glad that I had the opportunity to participate. It is amazing and exciting, along with tension and compromise in the Board of Governance meetings. Love those roll call votes!

The most rewarding benefit has been meeting all people along the way, both in our region and getting to know those outside of our region.

Happy Holidays! I would like to thank everyone in the region for the time and energy you have donated to our sport on top of the demands of your own busy personal life.

Hug your horse! Our horses are such fragile, forgiving, and generous animals. They put up with our efforts and when we do it right, they give us their best!

got suppleness???

Suppleness is what separates the average Dressage horse from the fabulous one. Ravel is the perfect example of this! This simple method assists your horse in reaching his MSP -- Maximum Suppleness Potential.

In order to be supple, muscles must be free of all tension. All horses accumulate tension in their muscles to one extent or another, mostly to a very large extent. Learn this simple technique to release tension from your horse's muscles. Cost is extremely reasonable. Sivia Gold 470-8404 siviagold@yahoo.com

NMDA is also a Group Member Organization of the United States Dressage Federation (USDF). The organization's purpose is to promote the understanding of dressage and to develop skill and excellence in its use, as well as encourage, promote and conduct exhibitions, shows, clinics and other events by which interested people may develop their potential as riders and train their horses to the extent of their capabilities. Privileges of membership include but are not limited to participation in the organization's activities and receiving the Handbook/Test Book, and monthly newsletter. Members also become Group Members (GM) of USDF, with all its benefits.

The Back Page

I want to thank everyone for the kind words of encouragement and praise for the new newsletter format. I've wanted to do the newsletter for a few years now and I am reminded of the old adage "be careful what you wish for"—the endeavor has been both a joy and a challenge but I hope that the newsletter is both useful and informative.

As I stated in the September issue, I really would like this to be collaborative effort and supportive of the community. Please let me know if you have an idea for an article or something you would like to see included, or is interested in doing a series of articles or a regular feature (this would be great! Particularly with a focus on education.).

As I will not publish another newsletter until January, I wish each of you and your family (two and four footed) a wonderful and joyful holiday season.

Linda
